ABOUT US

Labukore is a small village of nine households belonging to the Adi-Bokar community in the Monigong circle of Shi Yomi district very close to the Indo-China border. Before the Indo-China war in 1962, the locals used to trade salt, textiles, machetes and dzos (cross between mithun and yak) in exchange for animal skin, red dye, and chillies to Tibet that usually took them 4 days to reach by foot. Millets have always been their staple food source while other interesting varieties of crops, including a very unique purple potato variety called Chegar, is also common here.

ACTIVITIES

*Takin expedition

A 12-days conservation trek with former hunters as your guides & porters in search of the elusive Mishmi Takin along the valley of endless flowers, pristine lakes and hidden caves listening to tales of the mysterious Apoms of Bokar folklore. Witness some of the most exquisite and untouched landscapes in the world in this once-in-a-lifetime adventure.

*Red Panda Trail

A 3-4 hours hike from Labukore to the red panda habitat and camping overnight close to their spotting site. Former hunters with knowledge about the species's conservation will guide you.

OTHER ACTIVITIES

Patang Dako (bird sound walk), a fifteen minutes walk from the village to harmonize your soul with the chirping of the birds.

*Come to the Podi Barbi festival of the Bokar community and learn the ways of the Bokar Tribe. Sporting events kick off from 14th November and on December 1st, traditional cultural dance and singing of the folk song "Jajin ja" is done along with archery competition. On 5th December, Mithuns are sacrificed followed by a community feast in the village to mark the end of the festival.

Polo Ayum kana yakar nam (moonlight walk): Experience the beauty of the mountain peaks illuminated by moonlight as the flying squirrel jumps from branch to branch, while the sound of the river makes a peaceful lullaby.

Arik trail: Experience the village's horticulture and agriculture practices and taste seasonal products like plums, peaches, pears, kiwis, garlic, tomatoes, millet and purple potatoes.
